

Send messages to users on their preferred communication channel

The growth of social messengers as a preferred mode of communication amongst millennials has opened a new channel of interaction for companies. Similarly, many companies are using collaboration tools for internal employee messaging. With different dominant chat platforms in different countries, it poses challenges to businesses to manage multiple messenger apps on diverse platforms.

Companies need a single platform to manage all these apps to reduce complexity and enhance the user experience.

sendQuick integrates with all messenger platforms using a single API. Companies can leverage sendQuick's multi-channel messaging capability to send out messages via social messengers, collaboration tools, email, and SMS. This ensures a cohesive communication stream.
